About the Clinician: Cappy Pruett

Cappy Pruett is a seasoned all-breed handler and stock dog clinician with over 30 years of experience conducting clinics throughout the United States, Canada, Australia, and Europe. He is a successful open and advanced handler in all herding venues and has won numerous cattle trials, including those hosted by the National Cattle Dog Association (NCA). Cappy has also claimed the Grand Champion title in the sheep dog competition at the National Western Stock Show in Denver multiple times and the Open Ranch Sheep Dog trial at the Minnesota State Fair. In addition to competing, he is an approved judge and frequently accepts assignments in various venues. When not traveling for clinics or competitions, he offers private lessons in his hometown of Hudson, Colorado. His training approach emphasizes quiet confidence, focusing on teaching dogs to manage livestock collaboratively with their handlers.

What to Expect at a Cappy Clinic

Participants can expect a calm, quiet training environment where the focus is on teaching dogs to manage livestock effectively and respond to their handlers. Cappy demonstrates techniques that help handlers enforce their instructions and build positive relationships with their dogs, rather than simply guiding dogs through a course.
